

M AJOR RUNWAY OVERLAY PROJECT AT THE LOGAN-CACHE AIRPORT IN 2021

Logan Cache Airport is gearing up for a busy year starting with a Runway Overlay Project which consists of milling off and laying down a new surface on the main 9200-foot runway 35/17. This undertaking will require Runway 35/17 to be closed for about two months starting the end of April 2021 (weather permitting) and will also include grooving and striping the new surface at a total project cost of approximately $4M. This is a very significant investment. However, Airport Manager, Lee Ivie, has overseen projects totaling nearly $15M in his nine-year tenure at the Logan-Cache Airport. In addition to runways, airport projects include taxiways, ramp improvements, acquisition of safety approach/departure zones, and access paving to hanger locations (FYI: Funding for airport maintenance and construction comes mainly from aviation fuel taxes, not taxpayer funds). Some of Mr. Ivie’s other duties include working with the FBO (aircraft service provider) and hanger owners, as well as constant interaction with federal regulators. If that’s not enough, snow removal is also part of his multifaceted management challenge.

Lee's qualifications stem from a wealth of experience at three other airports in Utah, Oklahoma, and Idaho over a total of 25 years. His hobbies include fishing, skiing, hunting and playing Bluegrass music with family members on guitar, mandolin, and banjo. He and his wife, Debra, live in an apartment in Logan, but they also have a primary home at the Malad Summit in the mountains of Southeastern Idaho. They have three children and seven grandchildren. He enjoys great confidence from all stakeholders at our airport as he is a consummate professional in a very challenging position.
